This case has been held in abeyance because the criminal case against Michelle Dague continues.

The Alaska Supreme Court , in case S-12453, denied the petition to appeal last year's decision of the Alaska Court of Appeals which remanded the case to the superior court to allow the parties to litigate proposed aggravating factor AS 12.55.155(c)(5) before Ms. Dague is sentenced for manslaughter. The retrial of the aggravating factor was tentatively scheduled to be tried starting April 9, 2007, but as reported in the January, 2007 status report, the matter has been continued pending a ruling on the scope of the aggravating factor to be tried. The retrial has not been rescheduled, though it was anticipated the retrial would be scheduled within the next few weeks.

Accordingly, counsel for defendant suggests that the stay in the present civil case should continue and that the parties provide this Court with an additional status report on or before July 2, 2007.

Respectfully submitted, this 2nd of May, 2007.
